40,623. 1776, Biblia, Das ist: Die Heilige Schrift Alten und Neues Testaments (1776) Germantown PA. by Christopher Saur. This was before the soldiers went through Germantown during the Revolutionary War (a rare Bible hard to find anymore), cover is worn, spine is worn.

The first German language printing press in North America was established by Christopher Saur (Sower in English) to serve the many German speaking immigrants who were flocking to southeastern Pennsylvania – Lutheran, Reformed, Moravian, Amish, Mennonite, Dunkard, and Schwenckfelder. Saur (b.ca. 1694) was living in Wittgenstein, Germany, when he married a young widow, Marie Christine, in 1720. Their only child, Christopher Jr., was born there on September 26, 1721. The family came to Pennsylvania in 1724 and settled in Germantown (now part of Philadelphia) where Christopher Sr., eventually joined the Dunkards, also known as Brethren, and in 1738 began his printing career.

The establishment of a printing press in pioneer Pennsylvania was no small task. The lead type had to be imported from European foundries, and the handmade paper was not readily available. Not easily discouraged, Saur printed his first volume, an ABC book, in 1738 followed by an almanac that same year. In 1739 he began publishing the first successful German newspaper in North America which would be issued for many years. After printing many smaller volumes (including the first North American edition of the Mennonite and Amish hymnal Ausbund, see lot #11416 and #11417), Saur undertook the large task of printing a German Bible so that copies would no longer need to be imported from Germany. The 1,284-page Bible measuring 7 ½ x10 inches was completed in 1743.

The ink he made himself from a formula of his own devising.

When Christopher Saur, Sr. died on September 25, 1758, the printery became the property of his son Christopher Jr., who was thirty-seven years old and a Dunkard bishop. Five years later in 1763 he printed the second German Bible in North America. It's 1276 pages matched the size of those of his father's first edition, but he increased the quantity to 2,000 volumes.

When the Revolutionary War began in 1775, Christopher Jr., was semi-retired from his printery, having passed its responsibility to his sons, Christopher III and Peter. They proceeded to print 3000 copies of the third German Bible in North America which was issued under their father's name the following year. This 1776 Bible of 1,276 pages matched the previous two editions in size. Many of the copies were left unbound. Binding such volumes in leather by hand required much time and expense. Printers often retained unbound sheets and had a quantity of volumes bound each year for resale or sold them unbound to customers who had them bound in the style they desired. Various accounts have been written about the fate of the unbound pages of the 1776 Saur Bibles. Some related that during the Battle of Germantown on October 4, 1777, the pages were confiscated and used instead of straw to bed the soldier's horses.

The third edition, 1776, was printed and the unbound pages were laid on the loft of the Germantown meetinghouse to dry. Some were still there when the Battle of Germantown was fought.

The Revolutionary War brought an end to the Saur printery. Its press, especially because of the widely read newspaper, was considered "one of the most potent political weapons in the colony." As a nonresistant Dunkard Bishop, Christopher Saur, Jr. was opposed to warfare and preached against it in his sermons and in his newspaper.

40,624. Biblia, Das ist Die Ganze Gottliche Heilige Schrift alten und Neuen Testaments: by Gottlob Jungmann (1805) 1st printing in Reading PA. after the Revolutionary War. Cover real nice clasps missing.

40,625. Biblia: Das ist Die Ganze Gottliche Heilige Schrift alten und Neuen Testaments: by Friedrich Goeb 1813 (1st printing in Somerset, PA.).

Printing a Bible is a tremendous task to undertake under the most favorable conditions. But Goeb worked under conditions far from ideal. Somerset County was still largely forest when he began his work. Only fifty years before, white men had not yet set foot upon this territory. Furthermore, Goeb was kept busy with the cares of a family and was publishing a weekly newspaper, annual almanacs, and other works, all of which are now quite rare.

Somerset would hardly be the place in which one would expect a Bible to be published even today. The village of Somerset in 1813 was 18 years old and could boast a population of 150 people, living in 75 buildings. In contrast, Pittsburgh was already a thriving town, soon to become a city. Although Pittsburgh could claim the presence of a number of good printers, none of them attempted printing a Bible! Indeed, even the New Testament was not published by any Pittsburgh printer until 1815 and the whole Bible not until 1818. Goeb accomplished this feat five years earlier, yet today little is known of him.

Goeb's Early Life

From a Bedford County tombstone, we learn that Von Frederich Goeb was born on March 23, 1782. From his naturalization papers taken out at Somerset in 1809, we learn that he was born in Germany and came to Philadelphia on November 3, 1804, on the ship "Cato," from Bremen. Goeb was one of 38 passengers. Tradition has it that he first settled at Reading, PA. and, if this is true, we may have a clue concerning his decision to print the Bible in Somerset nine years later. For, in 1805, in Reading, PA. from the printshop of Gattlieb Jungmann came the first German Bible printed in America after the three quartos of Christopher Sauer and son, Germantonw, printed in 1743, 1763, and 1776.

The great task of Goeb's life, however, was the printing of the Bible. He must have begun setting the type by 1810, or before; the tremendous volume, including both Testaments, the Apocrypha and the table of feast days, required setting something like five million pieces of type, including spaces. This Bible was in the translation of Martin Luther. All this had to be set by hand and the type redistributed in the same way, for no printer had either the type or the space in that day to keep all pages set up at once. It is possible that Goeb even had to carve the large wooden type of titles and title-pages himself, as well as the woodcut which closes the Old Testament, since there is no evidence of the usual alignment characteristics of cast metal type.

The Goeb Bible is a ponderous volume, large quarto, more than a foot high, and bound in leather over heavy oak boards, nearly a quarter of an inch in thickness. No record seems to have remained as to the price of this Bible, although George Swetnam's copy has the notation on the fly-leaf, $6.00, in a hand-and-ink, not much, if any, later than the time of the printing.

In his prologue dated June 23, 1813, Goeb very modestly claims only that this is the first German translation of the Bible published in Western Pennsylvania.

The Goeb Bible is rather rare, the census lists 72 copies. As of 1961, the American Antiquarian Society was able to discover only 31 copies. But additional copies continue to show up and it is beyond question that more copies will appear as a result of the attention given this Bible by the sesquicentennial celebration held in its honor in 1963 at Somerset, PA.

= nice condition with 5 ribs on spine = (no clasps) = also German writing included.

40,626. Das Neue Testament Unsers Herren und Heilandes Jesus Christi = 1st printing in Somerset, PA. by Freidrich Goeb = (1814).

A Year after publishing his Bible, Goeb published a smaller edition of the New Testament, of which 29 copies are known at this time. In 1961 only 14 copies were known but additional copies continue to turn up at unexpected places. It is anybody's guess how many more copies of either the Bible or the New Testament will yet come to light.

= so, as we can see this copy is very rare and the cover is in really good condition but no clasps. 4 ribs on spine.

40,627. Eine Errsthofte Christenpflicht oder Der Schmale Weg Zum Leben Genannt: It was written in 1816-1817

by Franz Buchwalter and printed for 1st printing in 1822 by Friedrich Goeb in Schellsburg Bedford Co. PA. where he moved to after 1819.

In an advertisement Goeb speaks of his printing house as the "German and English printing house, three doors west of the residence of James Carson, Esq." In 1812 his paper announced plans for him and Heinrich A. Kurtz and Co., Pittsburgh, to publish a quarto edition of Johann Arndt's Wahres Christenthum (True Christianity) at $6.50 per copy, printing to begin as soon as 1500 subscriptions had been received. But no copy is known and it may never have been printed.

But already for two years, Goeb had been printing books on his own. Apparently his first was a religious treatise, Die Ernsthafte Christenpflicht (The Christian's Serious Duty), a small book of under 250 pages, printed in 1810. Only two copies have survived so far as is known and both of these are in the Mennonite Historical Library of Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana.* Another edition of this same work but distinct in many minor ways from the 1810 one was published under the title Eine Ernsthafte Christenpflicht... by Goeb in 1822. A copy of this is also in the Mennonite Historical Library.

*This book continues to be published by the Monnonite Publishing House, Scottdale, PA.

40,647. Martyrer Spiegel der Taufs = Gesinnten = published by Shem Zook Lewistown, PA. (1849). In 1849, Shem published the fourth German edition of the Martyrer Spiegel (“Martyrs Mirror”). The 987-page Volume’s title page states that it was printed in Philadelphia by King and Baird and “PUBLISHED BY SHEM ZOOK, NEAR LEWISTOWN, MIFFLIN COUNTY, PA.” Because of improved typesetting methods, this edition became smaller and more compact than previous editions, weighing only 6 ½ pounds or half that of the first German edition printed at Ephrata in 1748-1749. The 1849 edition was also the first to make any major language change in the original Ephrata text. The preface states: “A man of undoubted ability not only guided the printing of this work but also noticeably improved the language and style.” Whether that person was Shem himself or his talented brother David is not known. One might speculate that both assisted in the venture. By 1849, when Shem published his edition of the Martyrer Spiegel, the Amish settlement in Kishacoquillas Valley consisted of three congregations or districts: Lower, Middle, and Upper. Solomon Beiler, who was the bishop in the Middle District, questioned the centuries-old practice of baptizing candidates as they knelt in the house or barn where the church service was held. He felt that the baptismal water should be poured on their heads while they knelt in “living water” – a flowing stream or creek. That Shem shared Beiler’s viewpoint is apparent from his inclusion of a certain picture on the 1849 Martyrer Spiegel’s second division title page. The illustration depicts the baptism of Jesus by John the Baptist and shows both standing in the Jordan River. While the scene may or may not be historically correct, the fact that Shem chose to use it reveals how he felt about the baptismal controversy in his community. The picture had not been included in any previous editions or, for the matter, in any later printings. = nice condition, both clasps working.

40,648. Der Blutige Schau-Platz, Martyrer Spiegel Gedruckt bey Joseph Ehrenfried (1814) Lancaster, PA.

The second American printing of the Martyrer Spiegel was made by Joseph Ehrenfried (1783-1862) at Lancaster, PA. It states that this edition was published in the interests of “Mennonite ministers and leaders.” They very likely were concerned because of the War of 1812-1815 which was being waged at that time.

Joseph Ehrenfried was no stranger to the Amish and Mennonites of Lancaster County, having printed Dietrich Philip’s Enchiridion oder Handbuchlein of 568 pages in 1811 and the Ausbund hymnal in 1815, the latter being the fifth American edition. Altogether he is credited with having printed nineteen books during the ten-year period his shop existed. It is said he was forced into bankruptcy because of his heavy loss on printing the Martyrer Spiegel.

Basically the text of the Lancaster edition is a reprint of the Ephrata. By using smaller typeface and ½-inch wider pages, Ehrenfried was able to reduce the volume’s thickness to 1,014 pages; whereas the Ephrata edition had 1,512.

Another way the volume’s weight was reduced from Ephrata’s thirteen pounds to nine pounds was by using cardboard rather than wood under the leather covers. By becoming more compact it lost some of its interior beauty – smaller boldface letters replaced the decorative initial capitals which graced the pages of the Ephrata edition. However, its highly polished calf binding with six prominent “ribs” on the spine made it a handsome volume.

This printing’s only illustrations are a new rendering of the “Arbeite und Hoffe” man with a shovel on the front title page and a pair of birds on the second division’s title page. This edition has marginal notes like the Ephrata and Pirmasens but is the last to have them. Future editions have the notes at the bottom of each page rather than alongside the text.

It is not known how many copies were printed, but probably several thousand. Copies are frequently found today, and it is not considered especially collectable, as are the Ephrata and Pirmasens editions. It undoubtedly was a major financial investment for Joseph Ehrenfried which coupled with it being a slow seller contributed to his bankruptcy.

= This in very good condition with 2 clasps working and spine is 95% good, it’s very unusual to see a 1814 Martyrer Spiegel that the spine is not torn, (6 ribs on spine).

40,651. The Bloody Theatre or Martyrs Mirror = H.C., 6x10, 1048 pages, printed by David Miller near Lampeter Square Lancaster, PA. (1837) = By I. Daniel Rupp.

The first English edition of the Martyrs' Mirror is one half the size of the first German edition when placed on top of the 1748/1749 Ephrata Martyrer Spiegel. Naturally the type size in double columns is much smaller.

The title page states that it was "PUBLISHED BY DAVID MILLER, NEAR LAMPETER SQUARE, LANCASTER COUNTY, PA." The reverse side contains a copyright notice stating that it was "Entered according to an act of Congress, in the year 1836, by David Miller, in the Clerk's Office of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania." David Miller was a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church which had been founded by John Herr in Lancaster County in 1812. The title page also states that this English edition was translated from the German edition by "I. Daniel Rupp" and has "numerous texts of scripture more correctly quoted than in the German edition." Israel Daniel Rupp (1803-1878) was a self-taught scholar who resided in southeastern Pennsylvania. He is said to have been knowledgeable in eight or nine languages. Besides compiling many of his own volumes, he translated eleven into English, the largest being The Martyrs' Mirror. The accuracy of Rupp's translation was challenged nearly five decades later when a new English translation was being made at John F. Funk's Mennonite Publishing Company, Elkhart, Indiana. In the March 1, 1884 issue of Funk's semimonthly periodical, Herald of Truth, an article, "The Translation of The Martyr's Mirror," appeared. It took Rupp's translation to task, stating among other things: In the course of translation, we compare our work with former translations; and while our own work may not be perfect, we feel very sure that there will be comparatively few errors, and none so glaring and far out of the way as some we noticed in the English translation of I.D. Rupp published in 1837, of which a number of our people have copies.

If anyone may chance to think that the old translation would have been sufficiently correct, and that we have gone to unnecessary trouble and expense in retranslating the work, they will, no doubt, conclude that after all, it would not only have been folly to republish a work containing so many and with great incorrection, but positively wrong.

Then followed a column and a half of examples of Rupp's incorrect translation followed by the new "corrected" translation.

Bound in leather, this quarto edition has no illustrations. The words "Arbeite und Hoffe" appear on the title page but not the traditional man digging with shovel. An "INDEX" of topics and people's names is included on the volume's final pages: 1033-1048. The copy in Heritage Historical Library was obtained in 1976 from an Amish home in Lancaster County. Its 3-inch wide spine has a red leather nameplate with MARTYRS' MIRROR in large letters stamped on it in gold foil. It shows no signs of ever having had clasps. It looks quite plain compared with some of the early German editions.

= Very nice condition. Spine is very good.

40,652. The Bloody Theater or Martyrs Mirror = H.C., (1938) by Mennonite Publishing House.

The 1938 Scottsdale Printing More than half a century would elapse before another edition of the Martyrs' Mirror was made in 1938. Meanwhile John F. Funk's "Mennonite Publishing Co." at Elkhart, Indiana, had been forced into bankruptcy in 1903 due primarily to a bank failure and a fire. For many years it had been the hub of Mennonite publishing in America. That changed when the "Mennonite Publishing House" was established at Scottsdale, Pennsylvania. It was quite an undertaking for the Mennonite Publishing House to reprint The Martyrs' Mirror in such unpredictable economic times – the "Great Depression" having not quite ended. However, it had been fifty-two years since the previous printing with two generations having been born and raised; so there was a need for more copies of the centuries-old inspiring book. Bound in medium brown buckram, the 1938 edition has three embossed rectangles with raised lettering on the spine. The top largest one has "MARTYRS MIRROR." Halfway down the spine a much smaller one has "VAN BRAGHT". Towards the bottom in triple lines are "MENNONITE PUBLISHING HOUSE."

Opposite the title page is one of the frontispieces used in the 1886 edition, namely that of cherubs holding a banner having the book's title and the author's name on it. It remained unchanged in detail with 1660 in one bottom corner of the banner and 1886 (not 1938) in the opposite corner.

This printing is basically a reprinting of the 1886 except for its illustrations. The thirty-six engravings of that edition have been replaced with fifty-five exact reproductions of Jar Luyken's etchings from the 1685 Dutch edition – except not quite as sharp in their detail and slightly larger. The ones in the 1685 edition were photographed and then reproduced on zinc plates through the modern photoengraving process – precursor of photo-offset.

The fifty-five etchings begin with Christ being crucified, followed by all the Apostles, and ending on page 1111 with "Catharina Mulerin, Apprehended 1639." The most often reprinted scene of Dirk Willems rescuing his pursuer (1569) appears on page 741.

= good condition, information credit to David Luthy. Bound in leather, this quarto edition has no illustrations. The words "Arbeite und Joffe" appear on the title page but not the traditional man digging with shovel. An "INDEX" of topics and people's names is included on the volume's final pages: 1033-1048. The copy in Heritage Historical Library was obtained in 1976 from an Amish home in Lancaster County. Its 3-inch wide spine has a red leather nameplate with MARTYRS' MIRROR in large letters stamped on it in gold foil. It shows no signs of ever having had clasps. It looks quite plain compared with some of the early German editions.

= Very nice condition. Spine is very good.

40,653. Guldene Aepffel in Silbern Schalen = printed in Ephrata in 1745, 1st printing in America.

Found occasionally in Amish and Mennonite homes in America is the Anabaptist devotional, Guldene Aepffel in Silbern Schalen. This unique volume is of Swiss brethren origin and was first published in 1702 and again in 1742 in Basel, Switzerland. A third edition was printed in Ephrata, Pennsylvania in 1745 at the request of Mennonite bishop Henry Funk.

The Guldene Aepffel probably originates with the "Reist Leit" in an effort to restore and regain the spirit of early Anabaptism. The effort to promote a living connection to the legacy of nonresistance through literature has been the burden of successive Anabaptist generations. In America, it prompted the 1742 printing of the Ausbund, the 1745 edition of Guldene Aepffel, and the 1748/49 translation and printing of the Martyr's Mirror. The Guldene Aepffel is a "Sammelband," that is, it contains previously published materials (each with its own introduction) in a new volume, with substantial modifications. It is unique in that it combines documents from two very different time periods and from two streams of Anabaptism. The first part (403 pages) contains writing from 16th century Anabaptists: 1) the writings of Michael Sattler and the account of his trial and death, 2) the popular confession of Thomas of Imbroich (d. 1538), 3) an epistle from Soetken van den Houde (d. 1569), 4) eleven epistles by Michael Servaes (d. 1565), and 5) two epistles by Martyr Conrad Koch (d. 1565). The second part (94 pages) contains materials of much later Dutch origin: a revised reprint of the 1632 Dortrecht Confession of Faith and "Several Christian Prayers," both taken from T.T. van Sittert's 1664 manual of German translations of these Dutch documents. The prayers are mostly by Leonard Clock dating from 1625. There is also a directive on how to sing. The first part introduces major writings from the Swiss Brethren tradition. Only southern Germany at one time. In 1702, before the Martyr's Mirror was available in German, it served as a small martyrology for the Swiss and Germans. When the Martyr's Mirror was translated into German in 1748. Likewise, most of its prayers were included in Die Ernsthafte Christenpflicht when I appeared in 1708. In 1822 the von Mechel printers in Basel were still advertising the 1742 edition, the Martyr's Mirror of 1660 contains a partial reprint and when Christophehr Saur printed the Ausbund in 1742, he included a condensed version, which is still found in today's Ausbund. Hymn 23 in the Ausbund tells the story of Thomas von Imbroich and his martyrdom. In this 1702 reprint, the Swiss Brethren added significant new materials and made changes to the original 1632 text, reflecting their own emphases. One addition to the article on Marriage spells out abuses in marriage such as separation, divorce, and remarrying while the original partner is still living. It is also added that marriage is acceptable to “anyone in the Lord, but not too closely related by blood.” This sentiment is still heard in conservative Anabaptist circles. These changes show that although the Swiss Brethren accepted the Dortrecht Confession, they did so with some reservations. Yet it is notable that it was printed as a means of instruction and edification.

The next section is a collection of twenty prayers, eighteen of which were written by Leonard Clock. It is introduced as “Some Christian Prayers” and not as a formulary (a list of prescribed prayers for certain occasions), as Clock did when he first printed them in 1625. In a preface the compiler adds that “I do not wish to prescribe...nor to sanction a dependence on outward forms...my intention is simply to give a little help to those who lack practice.” This was perhaps the first introduction of audible or written prayers among the Swiss Brethren instead of the older form of silent prayer. The Dutch had been using such prayers since the early 1600’s.

Leonard Clock was ordained in Northern Germany and moved to Halland some time before 1589. He was instrumental in getting the Dutch and Swiss / German groups to unite. When audible prayers were introduced by the Dutch Waterlanders, Clock began writing prayers. Clock was also a prolific hymn writer. A compilation of 435 of his hymns was also printed in 1625. Four of Clock’s hymns are found in the Ausbund, including the Loblied (#131), and Lebt Friedsam, Sprach Chistus der Herr; (#134). The other two are #135, page 789, and #137, page 793.

The prayer book Die Ernsthafte Christenpflicht was first printed in 1708, six years after the Guldene Aepffel, and is also probably of Swiss Brethren origin. Today’s version of the Christenpflicht contains all of Clock’s prayers in this collection except one. The prayers are morning and evening prayers, prayers for before and after sermons, and prayers for special services such as baptism, communion, and weddings. There are also prayers for the sick, at mealtimes, and general prayers. The Amish today regularly use three of Clock’s hymns and quite a few of his prayers. Prayers XIX and XX are from a later period and are of a different genre. Prayer XX is a strange, fictitious account of the “unacceptable prayers of Cain, and the acceptable prayers of Abel,” a very Pietistic admonition. = a reprint of Ephrata 1745.

40,727. Writings & Fraktur by Sara Lapp = Michael Lapp's daughter. Black and white copies.

Sara Lapp was born September 3, 1833, in Leacock Township. Lancaster County, PA.; married to Solomon Stoltzfus, January 6, 1857. She died November 14, 1897, at age 64. They lived on a farm in Upper Leacock Township, on Horseshoe Road, near Heller's Church. They had two children namely; Barbara and Moses, the later died single, Barbara was married to Christian Miller. They in turn also had two children namely; Lydia and Lavina, the later was married to Christian L. Lapp. The late John Lapp, a son of this union was the last member of the family to live on our Sara Lapp homestead, in consecutive line.

Sara Lapp was a daughter of Michael Lapp, who was a Deacon in the church and a devoted writer. He wrote a model Lust-Gartlein which was printed in 1854 by Johann Baer and Sons, Lancaster PA.

Michael was given charge of the Pequea Alms Book in 1838 which was a succession of the Old Conestoga Alms Book which he likely held until his death in 1855. His script shows a neat, well composed autography unsurpassed by any other.

His wife, Barbara Stoltzfus, (the mother of our Sara), was the only daughter of Jacob & Maria (Blank) Stoltzfus, she was a sister to Pre. Jacob Stoltzfus, Deacon John Stoltzfus (Tennessee John) and Pre. Christian Stoltzfus (Buffalo Valley).

This fine fraktur work was presented to us from the home of Bishop Israel Beiler. It was debated, for a while, who this Sara Lapp was. When the page was found that says; "Für Die Sara Lapp M.L." it was at once detected that the M L is Michael Lapp, because that is his identify in his Lust-Gartlein and also much of the text in Sara's booklet is identical with that of her father's masterpiece. It is evident that her father furnished most of, if not all of, the text, although the whole work is her penmanship. It is no longer a question who the author was of this fine artwork and the lifeline of the booklet is clear.

From our collections, as well as from many others that exist, it is plain to see that it was a practice for many maidens, at that time, to write choice hymns or verses of scripture in fraktur style. Reckoned from the date of her work, Sara was about 18 when her piece was finished, a prime age for a maiden to be engaged in something that occupied her mind in way of good spirit, and her hands in a lasting culture that was useful. We have collections of some large pages of like art work artwork that were autographed and dated at the age of 14, while others were written at a later age. Some young married women advocated penwork in leisure hours during winter months following marriage, much like our young married women today attire to needle work while visiting relatives and friends.
